WESTHORPE HALL Residential Care

Westthorpe Hall, a residential care home with a sense of history and links to Nature

Westthorpe Hall provides high quality, 24-hour care for twenty residents aged over 65 years and for those who may have dementia. Respite care can also be arranged.

Person-centred care

Our approach

All of our care is centred on respect for our residents and their dignity, plus a determination to ensure that their life with us is a welcome experience.

Also, and possibly uniquely in the UK care field, it not only occupies a fascinating place in England's history, but also provides the elderly with a valuable link to the English countryside.

Westthorpe Hall at a glance:

- The Hall provides a unique care home environment – a Georgian building with a fascinating Tudor history.
- The Barker family's stewardship of the local countryside exemplifies a commitment to excellence at the Hall.
- As a family trust we are not profit-driven and have an on-going policy of constantly investing to improve the Hall's facilities.
- The extended family atmosphere is captured by our mission statement: 'Home from home care'.
- Being fully CQC compliant and committed to staff training is a guarantee that Westthorpe Hall's care quality is and remains of the highest standard.

Westhorpe Hall's history

The village of Westhorpe is very proud of its Tudor and royal connections and Westhorpe Hall is central to both. The Hall was built by Charles Brandon, the first Duke of Suffolk, as the marital home for himself and his bride Mary Tudor – the youngest sister of Henry VIII. Known as Mary Queen of France, she made Westhorpe her home until her death there in 1533.

The original Hall was demolished around the mid 1760s, though the distinctive Tudor three-arched bridge that straddles the moat remains today and within it is our Georgian main building.

Nature's contribution to care

The health benefits of contact with Nature are well attested. At Westhorpe Hall we believe, unusually in the care field, that allowing our residents secure access to our farm (in which our care home sits) and its wildlife can be beneficial for them.

Enjoying life at Westhorpe Hall'

Living at Westhorpe Hall'

'Westhorpe Hall's comprehensive administrative practices cover every aspect of our residents' stays.'

Finally a comprehensive but flexible admin system keeps our residents comfortable and contented. Further, as residents' conditions change, so too does the Hall's response.

Giving guidance

Selecting the right care home can be a complex and difficult task. We recognise this and that is why we help carers with guidance about financial and legal issues.
